

EHG Group of Companies

Individual solutions for the discerning customer.

We think in terms of solutions because we have our customers' success in mind.

At EHG we've dedicated ourselves unconditionally to the success of our customers. And our customers are successful when we ask the right questions, have innovative ideas and offer customised solutions. In steel and metal.

So, what is so special about EHG and what does that mean for our customers? Quite simply, we think in terms of solutions, not products. And this is something all of our motivated and responsibly minded employees will affirm.

We offer solutions that work so that our customers can excel.

Our strength lies in looking at the whole. This allows us to create, day in, day out, intelligent solutions tailored to the customer's specific requirements.

We keep the bigger picture in mind, and the details under control.

We base the way we operate around our customer's perspective. This means that, in addition to steel and metal, we also focus on smooth processes and continuous supply chains. With services such as EHG Complete, we no longer simply play the role of supplier, but act as service provider and partner.

We are never satisfied.

We continue to develop ourselves and our work, always driving ahead with optimising our product portfolio. This is because a significant part of our work is motivated by offering our customer tailored solutions.

Including even greater customer focus and innovations we use to help provide our customers with impressive competitive advantages.

A group with ten locations. Working together creates strength – both for us and our customers.

EHG's head office in Dornbirn has seen the company go from strength to strength since 1963; however, it is only by working together with our other sites that these individual parts for to create a strong unified entity: EHG.

For us, larger also means stronger.

As a group of companies with various locations, not only are we larger, we're stronger, too. For EHG, size isn't an end in itself, but ultimately a means of achieving customer orientation. Each of the subsidiaries strengthens the Group by contributing specific expertise and experience. Our customers profit from this.

Our employees are the future of EHG, because the company grows with each and every one of them.

The people who work for EHG all have some important things in common: the ability to work responsibly, think unconventionally and consistently question the status quo. This forms the core of EHG's unique corporate culture, where quality of work and quality of life mutually serve and strengthen one another.

Cooperation and collaboration.

Working well means working together. This is why we here at EHG value collaboration and mutual appreciation, both within the company and without, irrespective of duties and positions. Flat hierarchies, short paths and quick decisions ensure a pleasant working environment.

Values that are important to us.

Trust is our most important value; this applies within the company, but also of course in the relationships we have with our customers. The way we work is marked by mutual respect and consistent action. We ensure this by defining clear, ambitious objectives and reviewing the extent to which they are achieved.

And, EHG aims to impress: our customers with our first-class services, and our employees with attractive employment conditions and a well-thought out corporate strategy.

Best prospects for the future.

If a company wants to grow, it also has to grow its employees. This is why we expect and encourage the professional and personal development of each and every one. In all areas of the business, in all locations.

EHG products, services and consultancy all have one thing in common: the utmost quality.

Good consultancy requires closeness. We know the individual requirements of our customers and their markets like the back of our hand and are therefore able to provide good, professional advice. For EHG, ongoing personal dialogue with our customers is a key component of our corporate philosophy. And the basis for custom-made solutions.

Consultancy and fairness belong together.

The name EHG stands for professional advice as well as openness, reliability and fairness. We also consider the cooperative partnerships we have with our customers and suppliers part of this.

Partnerships start with understanding.

Not only do we know steel and metal, we also know how to listen – and to understand. Our understanding of customer wishes and current developments on the markets guarantees EHG will provide the highest quality advice. The great advantage of a partnership with EHG lies in our philosophy that is consistently holistic.
